Their argument, I think, is that there is money in the pipeline, an enormous amount of it, and it is build-ing up an infrastructure and trying to encourage countries to de-velop that infrastructure. Are we spending that money fast enough in your view Is there sufficient funding available ATTAH Mr. F. I would say a couple of things, Mr. Chairman. One is I think there is a tremendous amount of effort being extended but I think that there is too much passivity in terms of the ur-gency. That is that if you have 15, 000 people dying each day in sub-Saharan Africa, and we have billions sitting in a global AIDS fund, if we have billions in the Millennium Challenge Account. There are reasons why we have not spent down large amounts of these dollars but this particular issue has not really been at the forefront. I question and there is a record of Ambassador Tobias before he took his new position in his old position as focus in terms of the Global AIDS Coordinator, and this really was not at the front and center of their work. I just want to see us move this further. I was in Nigeria and spoke to the health minister there. It was indicated to me that over 22 percent at that time of the new HIV cases were related to blood transfusions, and some of...
